Introduction

A Marriage Licence is a document issued by an Ecclesiastical Court or its nominated Surrogate to a couple enabling them to get married without the calling of Banns on three consecutive Sundays in a Church or on three separate market days in the local market place.

The issuing Court for Common Licences depended upon where the bride and groom lived; if they lived in the same archdeaconry then a Archdeacon's Licence was issued from the Archdeaconry Court; if they lived in different archdeaconries then a Bishop's Licence was issued from the Consistory Court; if they lived in different dioceses but in the same province then a licence was issued by the Archbishops of either Canterbury or York; finally if they lived in different provinces then a licence was issued by the Master of Faculties from the Faculty Office of the Archbishop of Canterbury. Special Licences could be issued by the Archbishop of Canterbury, at his discretion, whereby the couple could marry at any time or place whether it was consecrated or not.

In Cambridgeshire there were 39 parishes under the direct jurisdiction of the Archdeaconry Court, 110 parishes under the jurisdiction of the Consistory Court, 12 parishes (until 1837) under the jurisdiction of the Archdeaconry of Sudbury and one peculiar that of Isleham.

There could have been a variety of reasons why a couple would want to obtain a licence. These could be that the bride was pregnant and needed a quick wedding to avoid bastardy for the child; they didn't have parental consent; were marrying against their parent's wishes; the groom had been offered a position which required a married couple; privacy i.e. not wishing to have their personal details disclosed in public; nonconformity; expense i.e. all the inhabitants of the village would expect to be fed at a party; emigration; if either of the couple were widows or widowers; and last but by no means least that marriage by a licence was traditional in the previous generations of the family.

The Marriage Licence was obtained by the prospective groom, or in a very few cases by the prospective bride or a parish officer. He or she would give the relevant information to the issuing Surrogate regarding, names, ages, place of residence, affidavit of parental consent and the church at which the wedding would take place. They would then be sworn in front of the Surrogate that all the information they had given was correct

It was also necessary for a bondsman to be appointed to say that there was no consanguinity, according to the 1662 Book of Common Prayer, between the prospective bride and groom. The bond could vary anything between £50 and £5000 depending upon the idiosyncrasies of the surrogate, but generally £200. The bondsperson (male or female) could be a relative, guardian, employer, a friend, parish official or even a semi professional bondsman. The semi professional is noticeable, especially in Cambridge, where the same names and professions occur on a regular basis; the professions are usually those of inn keepers or barbers. There were also fictitious bondsmen who are usually mentioned as John Doe or Richard Roe. It wasn't until 3 November 1823 that an Act of Parliament was introduced to terminate the need for bonds. After this date there is more information on the Marriage Certificate than on the documents needed for the Marriage Licence.

The legal age of marriage varied throughout time. From time immemorial the age was deemed to be puberty i.e. 14 for boys and 12 for girls. An Act of Parliament in 1653 raised this age to 16 for males and 14 for females but with the parents consent. After the Interregnum it reverted back to 14 and 12 still with parental consent. It wasn't until the Marriage Act of 1929 that the legal age of marriage was raised to 16 for both parties with parental consent if under 21 In 1970 parental consent was not required if the couple were over 18 years of age.

A Parliamentary Act dated 1 September 1822 required those getting married by licence, if over 21 years of age, to produce evidence of baptism from their place of birth. This certificate had to be signed by the incumbent of their parish church and he could charge them a fee of five shillings. If under 21 a certificate of consent had to be obtained from the parents which was witnessed by two independent people. These requirements did not apply to widows or widowers even if they were under the age or 21 years. The Act was repealed on 18 July 1823.

The information given to the Surrogate was entered onto the Bond and Allegation, which were signed by the prospective groom and bondsman. The Marriage Licence was then compiled. The Bond and Allegation were sent to the respective Diocesan Court and the information entered, in less detail, into the Marriage Licence Register. All these documents were then retained by the Court.

It has been mentioned previously that one of the reasons for getting a licence could have been the expense of providing entertainment and food for the whole village at the wedding party, as was the usual custom at local weddings. No records have been found of the expenses incurred in obtaining a licence. The only accounts available are those between the two Ely Diocesan Courts. It can only be surmised as to what the prospective groom had to pay out. The obvious payment is to the Surrogate for the actual Marriage Licence, other additional payments could be to the witnesses of the Bond and Allegation (usually a relative or servant of the Surrogate), to the semi professional bondsperson, to the vicar of the Church where the marriage took place, part or all of the bond, and the couples travelling expenses to visit the Surrogate and to the Church especially if neither of them were at the couples place of abode. The groom would present the Marriage Licence to the vicar of the Church, who would after the ceremony either retain it or return it to the groom. A Marriage Licence was only valid for three months after which a new licence had to be obtained. In the majority of cases this did not occur as the couple usually were married immediately they got the licence or at least within a week of obtaining it.

Some parishes have deposited their original Marriage Licences in the County Record Office Cambridge instead of leaving them in the Parish Chest. Whereas the majority of the documents i.e. the Bond and Allegation,, are held in the Ely Diocesan Records at the Cambridge University Library Manuscripts Room.

The majority of the Marriage Licences in the Cambridge Record Office (CRO) have been issued by the Ely Diocesan Archdeaconry Court, and the Ely Diocesan Consistory Court, with additional ones from the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, the Office of Faculties at Westminster, the Vicar General Office at Ludgate Hill, London, the Archdeaconry Court of Sudbury and the Consistory Court of Norwich. These are all for marriages taking place in Cambridgeshire.

Of the 197 parishes in the county of Cambridgeshire only 107 have deposited any Marriage Licences into the safe keeping of the Record Office. The number deposited varies from 1 (e.g. Chatteris, Fulbourn, Papworth) to 216 (Cambridge, St Edward) (see Appendix 1) It can only be guessed as to what has happened to the rest. They could have been thrown away, used as scrap paper, used to light the church heating boiler, sold as wrapping paper or even used as tapers to light the church candles.

There are a total of 1244 licences deposited in the CRO covering the period from 1594 to 1979 of which there are 635 between 1594 to 1840. This compares to a total of approx 21300 licence entries in the Ely Diocesan Registers for the same period, (i.e. only 3%). All of which have been transcribed and the publication of the data is pending.

For the Local Historian and Genealogist there are 1356 different surnames and 132 different trades or occupations (see Indexes 1 & 2). There is also a cross section of regiments from both WW1 and WW2. to which the couple belonged (see Appendixes 2 & 3).

For further information on the history of Marriage Licences and marriages in general, two excellent books in the Chapman Records Cameos Series are recommended, both written by Colin R Chapman:- 'Ecclesiastical Courts, Their Officials and Their Records' (ISBN 1-873686-03-X) and 'Marriage Laws, Rites, Records & Customs' (ISBN 1-873686-02-1).

We would like to acknowledge the help of all the staff at the CRO especially that of Gill Shapland; also for the delicate & exhaustive work of Debbie Rohan and Stephen Ettridge in the repair of the many Marriage Licences which were damaged: either torn, pieces missing or generally too fragile to handle by the general public until repaired.

Any mistakes or transcription errors are entirely our own.

Notes

1. All Cambridgeshire Parishes are referenced in the Cambridge Record Office under a 'P' letter followed by a number indicating the parish i.e. P1 – Gt Abington, P20 – Cambridge, All Saints. The additional figures in the reference indicate the type of document. (see appendix 1)
2. If there is more than one parish recorded for the marriage on the licence, the one underlined is where the marriage took place, i.e. St Edward.
3. Comments in [] brackets are editors insertions. They are either information obtained from the Parish Register when the licence is unreadable or comments regarding the state of the document.
4. All surnames are in capital letters, but if the person occurs in the entry more than once the repeated surname is in lower case
5. The surname index does not include the names of Surrogates or Registrars (Index 1).
6. If one party in the licence is divorced this is stated and names the previous husband or wife
7. Mention is also made if one of the parties is under age and the parent has legal control by right of court
8. Little Swaffham and Great Swaffham are Swaffham Bulbeck and Swaffham Prior respectively.
9. All villages are in Cambridgeshire unless otherwise stated (see also Index 3 re unknown counties)
10. If an age is given as 'over 17 years' it is an indication that the person has not reached 18 years old; but if 'over 21 years' indicates they could be any age above 21 years (above the age of consent)
11. Index 1 (Surname Index) only applies to those Marriage Licences listed in date order (not those listed under villages – Appendix 4)
